OBSERVATIONS

Natural or Stained Plywood

Plywood is made of layers of wood. Due to Plywood's nature, small marks may happen both in its surface as in its extremities. These are characteristic features of the material and not defects.

The plywood is finished in its natural color or with a wood stain. After this, the material is covered with varnish to protect its surface.

Lacquered Plywood

Plywood is made of layers of wood. Due to Plywood's nature, small marks may happen both in its surface as in its extremities. These are characteristic features of the material and not defects.

The plywood is subjected to a priming process. After this, the material is lacquered in successive layers until getting a homogeneous color finish. To increase hardness and resistance against scratches, the drying process is carried out in a stove.

Product sizes may vary up to 2 cm.
